Definition of Weighted Average Maturity (1) & (2)

(1) This weighted average maturity calculation uses the SEC Rule 2a-7 definition for stated maturity for any floating rate instrument held in the portfolio to determine the weighted average maturity for the pool. This Rule specifies that a variable rate instrument to be paid in 397 calendar days or less shall be deemed to have a maturity equal to the period remaining until the next readjustment of the interest rate.

(2) This weighted average maturity calculation uses the final maturity of any floating rate instruments held in the portfolio to calculate the weighted average maturity for the pool.

The maximum management fee authorized for the TexSTAR Cash Reserve Fund is 12 basis points. This fee may be waived in full or in part in the discretion of the TexSTAR co-administrators at any time as provided for in the TexSTAR Information Statement.

Economic Commentary

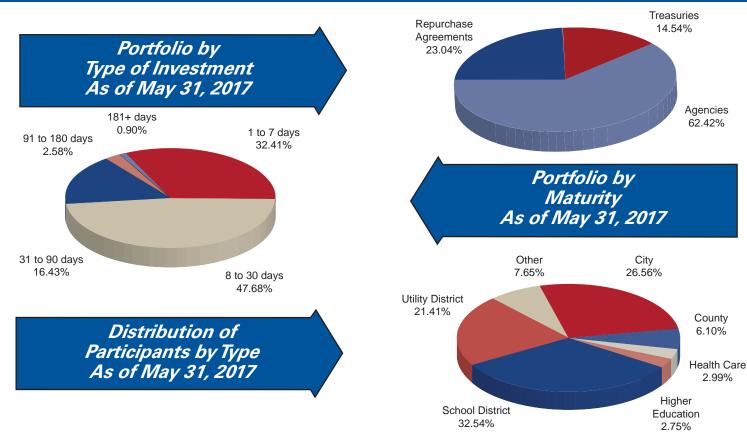

In May, political uncertainty in the U.S. continued as distractions from Washington persisted. There is little expectation that any of the "Big Three" pro-business agenda items - tax reform, infrastructure spending and deregulation - will see much progress before the end of the year. President Trump's budget proposal, which was released during the month, was met with bipartisan skepticism. In its current form, it is unlikely that both the Senate and House will pass the budget proposal before the fiscal year begins on October 1st. In addition, Congress must reach an agreement in September to raise the federal debt limit and approve government funding for the coming fiscal year. Meanwhile, the Fed left rates unchanged at its May Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting. However, the minutes of the meeting indicated that "most participants" thought it would "soon be appropriate" to raise rates again, supporting expectations for a June rate hike. It appears that economic growth is in line with Fed expectations and that the slowdown in inflation, particularly in March, was viewed as transitory. The minutes also provided more detail regarding normalization of the Fed's balance sheet, proposing the use of monthly caps, which could be adjusted quarterly, as a limit on the amount of proceeds that will be allowed to run off and not be re-invested.

Q1 2017 growth slowed, as anticipated, however the growth backdrop for the rest of 2017 looks brighter. With business and consumer confidence elevated and realized investment spending already improving, the outlook for growth has significant upside. In terms of the timing for the next federal funds rate increase, the committee has indicated that their objective is to continue to keep the pace of rate hikes "gradual". The median of the committee expects 2 additional rate hikes in 2017, as of the March 2017 meeting. Continued easing in financial conditions and further steady improvement in the labor market since the March FOMC has presented the Fed with the opportunity to raise rates again at the June meeting despite some softening in inflation data. President Trump will also be able to appoint three new members to the Board of Governors, as well as a Vice Chair of Supervision, this year. These appointments are unlikely to make a major impact on monetary policy in 2017. However, when Chair Yellen's term is complete in 2018, a new Chair could lead to a major shift in the Fed's approach to monetary policy going forward.

Economic Commentary

U.S. data released so far for Q2 has painted a muddled picture. Growth has accelerated while inflation has gone the other direction despite expectations that these two variables should be linked. The market consensus continues to be that economic growth will bounce back in the second quarter. When the Federal Reserve (Fed) looked at the overall picture, they took comfort in strong growth and healthy labor markets while viewing the inflation miss as transitory. As a result, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) proceeded to raise rates by 25 bps to 1.00 - 1.25% at their June meeting for a fourth time in the cycle and announce more formal details on their strategy to reduce the size of the balance sheet. While this was consistent with market expectations, the announcement that balance sheet normalization would begin "later this year" was more hawkish than investors anticipated. While the median long-run Fed Funds rate was unchanged at 3%, the unemployment rate estimate was revised down for the next few years, reflecting recent improvements. On the other hand, the softer-than-expected inflation data in recent months led the committee to bring down their inflation forecast for this year. As part of the plan outlined for balance sheet reduction, caps will be put in place to limit the amount by which the balance can shrink in any given month. The balance sheet would be reduced at an initial rate of $10 billion per month, accelerating at three-month intervals to $50 billion per month for a total balance sheet reduction of $600 billion. Global slack is keeping a lid on inflation, and inflation remains stubbornly below target in the developed markets. Outside of modest growth in the U.S., there's no wage inflation anywhere. We spent some time debating the drivers of inflation and infla-tion expectations. Certainly, an aging population that continues to work is one. But more important may be technology. Are the signals from telecom, from oil, from medical devices telling us that structural expectations for inflation need to be lower?

In light of disappointing hard data, reduced expectations for fiscal stimulus in 2017 and continued quantitative easing overseas, have muted our expectations for higher rates in the near term. We do expect, however, that growth in the U.S. will rebound later in the year, supporting another rate hike and the Fed's desire to begin tapering, and allowing yields on the U.S. 10-year Treasury to rise to between 2.50% and 3.00% by year-end. We believe the next 12 to 18 months will be a challenging investment environment. As the central banks reverse their policies and their aggregate balance sheet goes from expansion to contraction, the impact is likely to be volatile asset prices. Further, central banks will be "normalizing" their balance sheets at a time when growth and inflationary pressures should still be muted. Add to that, there may or may not be policy stimulus coming out of Washington and there may or may not be a hard Brexit. We'll be ready to expect the unexpected and will use our research-driven process to find value where we can.
